ABSTRACT

As a result of global development, significant changes have taken place in the complex relationship between man and nature. On the one hand, the application of the law of interdependence of quantitative and qualitative changes, the negative consequences of human activity accumulated over centuries have formed new environmental contradictions. In democratic, developed countries, philosophical research centers around the world, scientific research is being conducted to systematize efforts to prevent the global environmental crisis and solve regional environmental problems.

Currently, in the ecological landscape of the world, environmental protection is becoming a global problem, indicating that the world community is becoming the basis for the integration of social, economic and cultural relations.
